About the FDP

The Five-Day Faculty Development Program (FDP) on “Trends of Pharmacy Education in the 21st Century” is designed to equip educators, researchers, and academic professionals with the latest insights, pedagogical innovations, and technological advancements shaping modern pharmacy education. As the pharmaceutical sector evolves rapidly with emerging disciplines such as personalized medicine, digital therapeutics, artificial intelligence, regulatory updates, and outcome-based education, it is essential for faculty members to stay updated with global trends.

Objectives of the Program

- ▶ To create awareness about the latest trends, challenges, and opportunities in pharmacy education in the 21st century.
- ▶ To familiarize participants with innovative teaching-learning methodologies, including digital tools, simulation-based learning, and outcome-based education.
- ▶ To enhance the pedagogical skills of faculty members for improving student engagement and academic performance.
- ▶ To strengthen academia-industry interaction for developing job-ready and research-oriented pharmacy graduates.
- ▶ To encourage faculty to adopt competency-based education, ethical practices, and interdisciplinary collaboration.
